

Women Financial Advisors Network

A powerful platform where women advisors draw strength from shared experiences, transcend boundaries and lead industry change like never before.

Built by women advisors for women advisors, the Women Financial Advisors Network empowers successful professionals to share their personal insights and spark business growth through a variety of dynamic initiatives.

Since its founding in 1994, started by advisor Margaret C. Starner, CFP®, the network has grown from a grassroots effort to a force more than 1,300 advisors strong. Together, these women work to cultivate meaningful relationships and grow their businesses with the full support of a firm that puts advisors first.

WOMEN'S SYMPOSIUM

The annual Women's Symposium, a centerpiece of the network, is an event that unites women from across the country for an experience unlike any other. Featuring best practice seminars, breakout sessions, compelling presentations from Raymond James leaders and industry experts, and more, the symposium has one guiding mission: to fuel women's success in financial services.

WOMEN'S ADVISORY COUNCIL

The Women's Advisory Council represents not just women advisors, but some of the most talented advisors at Raymond James. Their experience and business styles are diverse, which only adds to the breadth of advice and guidance they impart to peers across the firm. Each of these women has her own story and her own unique professional history, but they do share one thing: a fierce desire to empower women advisors to excel. Their goal and the network's, as a whole, is to make it easier for you to grow your business with the backing of a community of like-minded financial professionals.
